Australia's largest sail-training tall ship was badly damaged this morning as it was struck by the 8,814 teu Maersk Shekou. The boxship also hit the Western Australian Maritime Museum while entering the inner harbour of Fremantle port this morning.

The 1986-built STS Leeuwin II tall ship was dismantled in the accident, with two of its crew injured. The hull of the 55 m long sailing vessel remains in tact.

An investigation into the accident is set to get underway.
