Sweden's Wallenius SOL has acquired British ro-ro outfit Mann Lines adding new offices in Estonia, Latvia, and the UK, while increasing its presence in Finland, Germany, and Benelux.

"This strategic move will enable us to offer a broader range of solutions tailored to customer needs. By combining our strengths, we will achieve increased precision and adaptability, along with enhanced local expertise and presence in our key markets," Wallenius SOL stated in a release.

Wallenius SOL has five ships in its fleet while Mann commercially manages two vessels. No price has been revealed for the acquisition.

"This acquisition, will among other things, result in a larger fleet and an expanded port network stretching from the Baltic countries to northwest Europe," said Elvir Dzanic, the CEO of Wallenius SOL.
